Successful partnership: Luohe Yinge Tissue Paper Co., Ltd. and Voith

2014-06-06

After the installation of NipcoFlex T shoe presses in two tissue lines supplied by Voith, Luohe Yinge Tissue Paper Co., Ltd. is completely satisfied with the performance of the two systems: "The shoe presses bring outstanding results", says QiFeng Wang, Vice General Manager at Luohe Yinge Tissue Paper. "We obtain a dry content after the press that is 5% higher than with conventional technologies. Thus we save 20% of thermal energy in the dryer section."

In 2012, Voith delivered two identical lines for the production of tissue paper in a basis weight range of 12–30 g/m² to Luohe Yinge Tissue Paper to China. The lines include the entire stock preparation, the wet end process and the tissue machines, from the headbox to the reel.

The tissue manufacturer is very satisfied with its investment, as ShiJin Zhang, General Manager at Yinge Tissue Paper, confirms: "We can consolidate and expand our position in the Chinese market with the new machines. We are now in a position to meet the increasing requirements of our customers regarding quality and quantity and have thus achieved our aim."

Luohe Yinge Tissue Paper Co., Ltd. was founded 20 years ago in the province of Henan, China. The Voith tissue machines are designed for an operating speed of 1,900 m/min and an annual production about 60,000 metric tons each with paper width of 5,550 mm on the reel section.
