Voith expands portfolio for pulp drying

2013-08-09

With a further-developed press fabric, Voith is expanding its clothing portfolio for pulp production. Voith already delivers entire pulp drying machines, from the headbox and the innovative vertical dryer section to the cross-cutter and bale packing – the forming fabrics and roll covers from Voith are now supplemented by the further-developed CellFlex VMax press fabric.

Along with the well-known roll covers such as SolarFlow or MegaFlow, Voith also offers a broad range of different press fabrics for pulp production. The CellFlex VMax press fabric has been developed to provide a particularly long-lasting and continuous dewatering capacity. CellFlex VMax press fabrics are already in use worldwide and help pulp producers significantly improve their production.

The entire portfolio is perfectly coordinated. Voith offers pulp producers all the forming fabrics, press fabrics and roll covers they need from a single source. The right combination of press fabric and forming fabric from Voith can powerfully increase pulp production. These innovative solutions from Voith for pulp production are successfully used worldwide.
