Pyrox and Pyrox^{High}: Voith launches new dryer fabrics onto the market

2015-06-03

With Pyrox and Pyrox^{High} Voith is launching two new heat-resistant dryer fabrics onto the market. They are part of the CleanWeave family of dryer fabrics and were especially designed for dryer sections with moderately high temperatures. Pyrox fabrics are made from a blend of hydrolysis resistant PPS and abrasion resistant PET materials. Like the entire CleanWeave product family, Pyrox and Pyrox^{High} is produced from SynStron yarn, a material developed by Voith that is especially suited for the challenging conditions of the dryer section.

The proven weave structure of CleanWeave dryer fabrics is incorporated in Pyrox and Pyrox^{High}. It offers a low internal void volume and minimal yarn crossover points, ensuring contamination within the fabric to be reduced. The compact fabric structure simplifies cleaning of the surface to ensure constant permeability. All CleanWeave products from Voith have a stable, easy-to-clean fabric structure which is unique in the industry. This ensures that the fabric maintains close to its original air permeability, maximizing drying and sheet handling over its entire service life.
